A Message from Cheryl Goodwin President/CEO

Family Resources was established in 1849 and we've learned after 164 years of pursuing our mission that there is one true constant; there will always be change. When the needs of our served communities change, we adapt. When state laws change, we adhere. When budgets are cut, we survive. That's what you do when you're on a mission and we are so grateful to have you on our side.

To guide us through these changes, a new 3 year Strategic Plan was crafted and approved by our Board of Directors. The goals of this plan require us to concentrate on more than just providing services but lead us into the future through strategic partnerships, community coordination on critical social issues and aggressive resource development goals.

Challenges Come with Change

Turning anyone away goes against our nature to serve others but inadequate funding is our reality so we are forced to do the best we can with the resources at hand. It is a constant balancing act when budgets are cut or funding is reduced. Last fiscal year, we were forced to reduce our service levels in our 24 hour care programs for youth. This resulted in: 1) the transfer of 30 children from our campus in Davenport to other placements 2) the suspension of our emergency youth shelter and 3) the suspension of our community based supported living program for developmentally disabled youth. Accompanied by this change were 25 full time staff layoffs, reductions in employee benefits and a restructuring of departments to cut costs. This year, in an effort not to reduce service levels any further, we made deeper cuts to our human resources and employee benefits.

It becomes easy to see the chain reaction that certain changes bring. The simple fact is, for many of our services, the reimbursement rates determined by the state are not sufficient in tending to the complex needs of the children and families we serve. Extreme care calls for extreme funds. Instead of fighting the terms set forth by our funders, we do our best with what we've got. I am proud to lead an organization driven at every level by doing what's best for clients first. And we continue to nourish our clients, and staff, as much as these constraints allow.

Advocacy

We took to the capital with greater determination this year than ever before – at stake, preservation of our very foundation as an agency – 24 hour care programs for children. Our goal was to advocate for the kids that need us by influencing legislation that would even the playing field among providers. While contracts for this service all look the same, there are providers in the state being paid at much higher rates than we are. Our push was for an equalization of rates amongst providers. While our efforts were not futile, that particular legislation was not passed. Instead, the legislature passed a 5% rate increase to all providers, keeping the inequalities the same but giving us a little more to work with. Still, reimbursement rates remain an average of $40 a day short for each child in our care. Serving 50 kids a day over the course of a year, it doesn't take long for an unsustainable deficit to rise. We'll continue to advocate because filling that gap is critical – not to regain lost benefits or reduced pay to staff – but to preserve this invaluable service and prevent further reductions to the number of children we are capable of helping.

Creating Positive Change

You've heard of taking matters into your own hands, right? We think it's time we do just that. We know we can no longer rely on inadequate funding from state and federal sources. Our 2013-2016 Strategic Plan outlines targeted goals and strategies that challenge us to build upon our financial support from individuals, corporations and foundations. Growing this support is essential and will provide us with security and flexibility to deliver services in the way that we know is best for children, families and individuals. Our goal for annual support this year is $500,000. To help us reach our goal, we've established a challenge pool of donors ready to match all new or increased gifts of support – doubling the value of those gifts and the impact they will have on those we help.

Staff. More Like Family

At Family Resources, we truly are a family. This job couldn't be done any other way. Our family includes paid staff, volunteers, and donors. The continued support from all people involved has allowed us to carry on, both literally and figuratively. In a year of many changes, some very difficult ones at that, our family remained true to the mission; servicing children, families and individuals day in and day out. Their passion and dedication is impossible to measure. I am eternally grateful for each and every one of them and their continued support to preserve our safety net of services throughout each of the communities we serve.

A report

Our Call to Action

a message from Sarah Johnson, Incoming Board Chair

The statistics reflected throughout this report are astounding and scream for our attention. Thankfully, Family Resources, through its dedicated staff, volunteers and donors, is responding. In 2013, Family Resources worked to restore a sense of safety for countless children, individuals and families impacted by trauma. The services provided include culinary vocational skills, domestic violence sheltering, counseling for sexual abuse, high quality schooling for children requiring more than what is traditionally provided, and so many others. Together, and in cooperation with other area providers, these services create a system of care that responds to the loud but often unheard scream for attention in our communities.

Not only does Family Resources provide safe places for individuals and families after trauma leaves its mark, but it is also working to share preventative practices along a continuum of trauma informed care. This preventative care breaks the cycle of trauma that exists in far too many of our families, which affects each of us. Creating trauma-informed systems of care is essential in raising the standard of care and improving access to services for children, families and communities impacted by trauma.

Thank you to everyone who has contributed to making a “SAFE” place for individuals and families through Family Resources. Our staff, donors and volunteers have worked together this year to further the Family Resources’ mission. The scream for attention remains and on behalf of the Board of Directors, please continue to respond.

Investing in our Community

a message from Barb Davis, Board Member

Muscatine is so much more than where I live and work. It is where I’ve chosen to call home – it is where I’ve established a life with my husband, raised my son and daughter, and developed great friendships. The Muscatine community is a fabric of who I am. I am proud to be a part of a community that cares so much about the safety and well-being of women, children and families and I see it in action every day.

That’s why I’ve chosen to be a part of the work of Family Resources – an agency that has been serving the Muscatine community since 1969. As a member of the Board of Directors, I’m proud of the work that Family Resources is doing each and every day in Muscatine to make our community stronger. Family Resources is helping to fill the mental health services gap as the sole provider of counseling and therapy services for the underinsured and uninsured in our community. Family Resources is monitoring the safety and well-being of our children – providing in-home services to 305 families with reported abuse or neglect this year. Family Resources is working to break the cycle of violence; providing essential domestic violence and rape/sexual assault counseling, advocacy, and sheltering services.

We come together for those in need – that’s what we do and that’s what Family Resources is doing for Muscatine. I am grateful to be a part of such a caring community and I am grateful for the support that you’ve shown to Family Resources. We could not do this work without you and you can trust that your support stays here – invested in services in Muscatine to make our community stronger.

Our Values

We are passionately committed to our core values. We believe that these values give purpose and meaning to our lives and to those of our clients. They also provide direction for the whole organization. We intend that these values will guide us in our decision-making for many years to come.

Safety: We believe that safety is fundamental. For the safety of our clients, our staff or the community, safety comes first. A safe environment is necessary for our clients to learn, to grow and to turn their lives around. Safety grows out of trusting relationships that are based on respect for the dignity of all persons.

Service: We are here to serve others. Service has been a core value of Family Resources since 1849. We serve others because we care. We care deeply about children, about individuals, about families and about the communities we serve. We are committed to providing a continuum of services to respond to the needs of people.

Teamwork: We believe that teamwork works for us, for our clients and for our communities. Our board, staff and clients work together in teams. As an organization, we believe that working collaboratively with other partners in the community is the most effective way to pursue our mission.

Resourcefulness: We believe that Family Resources has grown since 1849 because we are resourceful. As the needs of our community changed, we have learned to adapt, to grow and to change with the times. We believe that to accomplish our mission, we need to continuously learn, innovate and be open to new ideas.

The Impact of Our Work

Restoring a Sense of SAFETY through Social Services

Expanding our Reach to Help More Victims Feel Like Survivors

Funding cuts and contract changes are something we've unfortunately gotten pretty used to when it comes to our domestic violence and sexual assault counseling and shelter services. This year has been no exception. But we continue to lead the way and adapt to these changes as tireless advocates for those who have been through unimaginable trauma - survivors of violent crimes.

This year the state of Iowa restructured the ways in which services are provided. They released three new contracts for service: Domestic Violence Comprehensive Services, Sexual Assault Comprehensive Services, and Sheltering Services. Family Resources was one of only two providers in the state to be awarded all three contracts. We take pride in knowing that this is a reflection not only of the quality of our direct service to those in need - but also of our expertise and leadership at the state level in advocating for the needs of survivors of violent crimes.

What does this all mean?

Family Resources will now be providing advocacy, counseling, crisis response, education, prevention and sheltering services to survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault in an expanded five county region in Iowa: Clinton, Jackson, Louisa, Muscatine and Scott. Additionally, we will continue to provide those services to residents of Rock Island County out of our Moline office.

responses; particularly as it relates to the use of shelter services. Modernization of services introduces a new model of practice referred to as the "Housing First Model." Simply stated, this model recognizes that physical needs for safety and permanency must be resolved before you can truly begin to address the emotional needs of survivors of violent crimes.

Rapid Re-Housing is a strategy of the Housing First Model that seeks to assist survivors with access to housing as quickly as possible in order to establish and maintain a sense of safety and stability. This may include a temporary stay in our shelter or it may include alternative interventions like assistance with rental deposits and monthly rental stipends, short term hotel stays while the perpetrator is being removed from the home, advocacy to prevent evictions in cases where extensive damage has been done by the perpetrator. At its core, it's about giving back power to the survivor to decide what assistance is needed.

You may have noticed the use of the word survivor throughout this piece. That is intentional. We are in awe every day of the amazing resiliency and perseverance of the individuals that come to us for help. They are survivors – and they deserve to be treated that way.

Soon, you'll begin to notice something else – our new name. One that we feel unifies our services across our newly expanded region and empowers the courageous individuals that come to us to feel like the survivors they are from their very first contact with us.

We're proud to introduce you to

Every 9 seconds in the US a woman is assaulted or beaten

Where There is Change Comes Opportunity

The state of Iowa has challenged providers to "modernize" their services; recognizing that in many rural areas across the state accessing services can be difficult. The new contracts call for mobile advocacy and a focus on the long term needs of survivors to truly break the cycle of violence. The contracts also require that staff be trauma informed and implement Trauma Informed Care practices into their service – music to our ears!

This "modernization" of services, a term the state has adopted, calls for a shift from traditional modes of crisis response to survivors of violent crimes to more individualized

Unleashing the Potential Within

Family Resources offers four specialized foster group care programs for up to 50 children each day between the ages 12-18. Although the specific reasons for their placement with us vary, all of the children we serve unfortunately share a common theme – trauma. They have experienced trauma as a result of horrific physical or sexual abuse, neglect, or abandonment. They come to us with significant acting out behaviors as a result of their experiences. Many are angry and act out aggressively and destructively. Others are withdrawn, defeated and suffer from mental health issues. We help them feel safe, heal and set a new course for their lives.

Our foster group care programs truly make a difference in the lives of children – children like Ryan.

Ryan came to us with significant trauma as a result of repeated sexual and physical abuse - he trusted no one. He was angry and full of rage, and rightfully so. Our challenge was to find a positive outlet for Ryan so he could focus on what was important, his future.

After making great strides in the safety of our environment, our staff asked Ryan if he'd like to participate in our Culinary Kids vocational program. That was his moment – as if someone had flipped a switch – he now had something positive to work for and was being appreciated for doing something productive and good. Ryan eventually graduated from our program and moved into his own apartment in Minneapolis, MN. Why Minnesota? Ryan was accepted into Le Cordon Bleu Culinary Arts Academy where he is on his way to accomplishing his goal to become an Executive Chef one day. Ryan's life is now focused. He has goals and a direction for his future. Ryan had the potential all along – he just needed to feel safe. He was SAFE at Family Resources.

“I want to move forward in my life and take the first step to achieving my ultimate dream of becoming a successful Executive Chef. I have been working within the food industry over the past few years and I am ready for new challenges. Cooking has always been of interest to me and I want to build a career which I enjoy. My goal is to complete my education and work hard to continue my journey to become an accomplished chef. I want to enjoy my work and have stability in my life.”

Culinary Kids

Culinary Kids is a vocational catering program for kids ages 14-18. Youth involved in the program learn how to prepare all of the catered dishes and attend the catering events as food service workers. The program is aimed at giving kids a direction in life and a renewed sense of self-worth. Whether or not they want to continue on in the food industry, they learn valuable life skills such as cooking, teamwork and being responsible employees. While interacting with the community on catering events, kids have the opportunity to practice and develop their social skills and to receive positive reinforcement for a “job well done.” The Culinary Kids program has catered for local and state officials, including an event for Governor Branstad, a number of businesses and organizations, and everything from intimate gatherings to large events. For catering information contact Sal Cracco, Dietary Supervisor, 563-468-2152.

The Impact of Our Work

Restoring a Sense of SAFETY through Advocacy

By the age of 9, James had attended 11 different schools. Prior to coming to live with his grandmother last year, he and his two younger siblings; Lynn (8) and Joe (7) didn't know what pajamas or bed sheets were. "They moved around so much, they never had beds before," stated their grandmother Annette, "they always slept on floors, couches, and chairs." James, Lynn, and Joe have been through a lot in their young lives. Their mother struggled to provide the physical and emotional care they needed. With their father in prison, the children were often left in the care of others; two of those others were registered sex offenders. Finally realizing that she couldn't provide the stability, care and nurturing her children needed, their mother signed over guardianship to their grandmother in the fall of 2012. "They had nothing when I first got them, we had to start all over. They didn't have toys or clothes but also didn't have skills like hand washing and tooth brushing. They all had a full head of lice. They didn't know things like how to tie their shoes. They would practically put their whole face in their plates when they ate because they didn't always get to eat before," Annette stated, "they used to be so angry. They would kick, hit and throw fits on the floor. They used to call each other terrible names and they hated going to school." Shortly after receiving guardianship of the children, Annette contacted the Family Resources Counseling and Therapy Services for help. The children each started seeing a play therapist and Annette and the children participated in Behavioral Health Intervention Services. "The children have all turned around since we've been coming here," stated Annette. "They love going to school now and can control their anger. I used to get calls from the school every day and I haven't gotten any yet this year. The children listen to me better and get along with each other better. Life is so much easier now than when I first got them."

This story illustrates the kinds of unthinkable trauma our clients have experienced – we see it every day. Their struggles to cope are no surprise to us given all they have endured and yet, they show such incredible strength and resiliency. The progress of these young children is remarkable and offers a testament to two very important factors in the healing process – 1) feeling safe and 2) receiving services from a provider that understands the impact of trauma. That's why Family Resources is leading the way in our served communities to advocate that all service professionals be trauma informed.

About Trauma Informed Care

Trauma Informed Care (TIC) is a broad term. We throw it around so often with the expectation that everyone understands it, but what is it exactly? At the base level, there is trauma. The majority of people experience trauma as children. This type of trauma is defined as Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) - stressful, often violent experiences that have a damaging impact on the developing brain in children. Research has shown a powerful and compelling link between harmful experiences in childhood and poor adult health even decades later. This trauma can affect all people, any race, any place and any income level.

Family Resources' theory of change: Understanding the importance of early development and neurobiology, as well as the treatment and reduction of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs), leads to improved long-term well-being for children, adults and families.

People often say that admitting there is a problem is the first step to any recovery program. With trauma, recognition is key. It's not until you get to the root of the problem that the problem can be addressed. Trauma Informed Care is about asking those in need of help "What happened to you?" rather than "What's wrong with you?"

Community Application

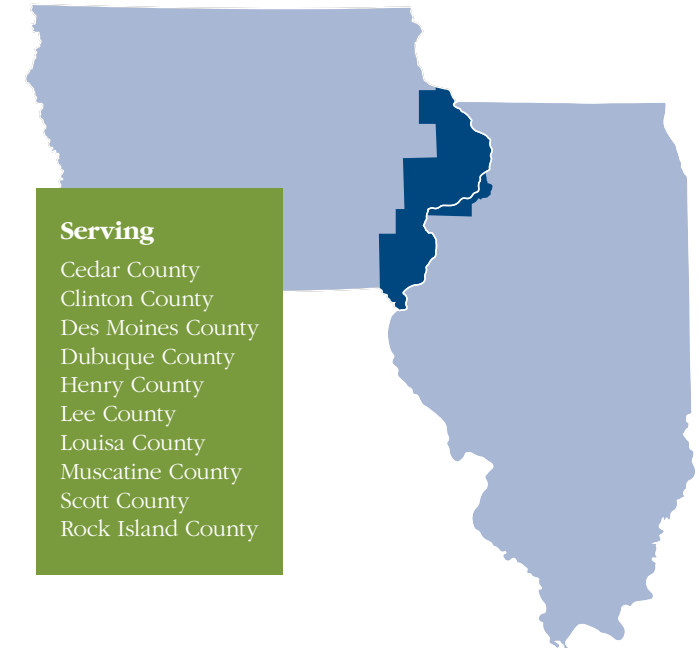

What Does This Mean?

Serving 10 counties in Eastern Iowa and one county in Western Illinois, the combined population of our service area is approximately 500,000 people.

The costs for untreated childhood trauma are high for all of us. In the classroom, kids can lack focus and struggle academically and socially. These students are less likely to graduate from high school or go on to enter a higher education program of any type. They often become easily frustrated and are in a state of either hyper-arousal or disassociation. As these children become our workforce, productivity in the workplace suffers, employee absenteeism rises, and there is impending risk of decreased employee morale spreading.

The cost? Children that drop out of school cost taxpayers an average of $500,000 over the course of their lifetime in reduced income, poorer health and increased dependence on social services. Missed work due to anxiety, depression, and substance abuse totaled $371 billion the US in 2008. Increased healthcare costs are yet another symptom of untreated childhood trauma. Studies have found a direct correlation between adverse health issues such as heart disease and other chronic illnesses and the number of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) an individual has endured.

Trauma affects each and every one of us. Along the Mississippi river we see the effects of ACEs every day. When children are exposed to chronic stressful events, neurodevelopment can be disrupted. Disruption in early development of the nervous system can impede a child's ability to cope with negative emotions and contribute to emotional and cognitive impairment. Over time, and often

Our Mission

To strengthen children, families and individuals by providing quality services that engage community resources to create effective solutions during adolescence, the child may adopt maladaptive coping mechanisms, such as substance use or risky sexual behaviors. Eventually, this contributes to disease, disability and social problems, as well as premature mortality.

Communities who achieve the highest return on their investment in trauma informed care begin with the end in mind; that is, they focus on prevention and early intervention of childhood trauma.

Students on the Wittenmyer campus work in unison to manipulate a parachute. By doing so they learn to regulate their heart rate and breath. Calming the body is key to calming the mind.

More than

Eastern Iowa – Western Illinois Trauma Informed Care Consortium

Family Resources has been awarded $75,000 from the United Way Health Council to coordinate and develop Trauma Informed Care in the Quad-Cities. The grant launched in November, 2013.

“Family Resources is pleased to partner with the United Way of the Quad Cities and Child Abuse Council to bring awareness and education around the profound impact of adverse childhood experiences to a developing child. Children exposed to toxic stress are much more likely to develop life-long problems in learning and behavior as well as emotional and physical health. Through the United Way of the Quad Cities grant the Eastern Iowa –

Western Illinois Trauma Informed Care Consortium will be developed. The goal of the Consortium is to create a “trauma informed” Quad-Cities and reduce the occurrence of toxic stress for children in our bi-state community.”

– Cheryl Goodwin
President/CEO Family Resources

Our Philosophy

We believe it is a privilege to work with individuals, families and communities. We believe they have the most insight into their past, present and future. Our role is to partner with them in creating effective solutions with respect to diversity. With this understanding, Family Resources carries out its mission.

The Family Resources staff receives intensive training on the causes and effects of toxic stress on a developing child as well as the principles of practicing Trauma Informed Care. Over 250 employees have worked hard to complete the full 12 hours of training. Upon completion of all classes employees receive a Family Resources Trauma Informed Care tee shirt.

Leading the Way in Our Served Communities

Family Resources has enjoyed a rich learning experience with the Midwest Trauma Services Network (MTSN). Our partnership began in 2010 and has included over 100 hours of training, mentoring, consultation and assistance in implementation of therapeutic treatment curriculum.

MTSN has assisted our organization in developing synergistic training for staff that includes interventions for families involved in multiple systems. Training provided by MTSN has included: body regulation work, youth and staff debriefings for critical stress occurrences, staff self-care, and several curriculums based therapeutic treatment groups for children and families.

4 children die every day as a result of child abuse

Volunteers in Muscatine help to fill weighted bears. In addition to providing comfort and security, the weight and deep pressure provided by weighted stuffed animals help to calm the central nervous system and bring the child's awareness into the present moment.

The Practices of Trauma Informed Care Put to Action

When children experience psychological trauma such as abuse, neglect, witnessing violence, illness or injury, and accidents, their brains are flooded with stress hormones. The body's stress response is designed to be short-term. Increased levels of stress hormones for prolonged periods of time can impair the brain's functioning. While not all children who have witnessed or experienced some sort of traumatic event suffer from traumatic stress, many children who have experienced at least one traumatic event in their lives are greatly affected by the incident. Changes in brain development due to the prolonged increase in stress hormones may lead to children having difficulty regulating their emotions, managing stress, and integrating sensory experiences.

The Impact of Our Work

Restoring a Sense of SAFETY through Family Restoration

Jack was just a baby. As he lay there at Mercy Medical Center in Dubuque, tests would reveal he was born with methadone in his system. Fast forward two months. Iowa Department of Human Services (DHS), involved in his case from birth, would learn that both parents were still actively using methamphetamine. Enter Family Resources.

Family Safety, Risk and Permanency Services

Family Resources holds a contract with Iowa Department of Human Services (DHS) to provide safety, risk and permanency services to families in Cedar, Clinton, Des Moines, Dubuque, Henry, Jackson, Lee, Louisa, Muscatine and Scott Counties. Our ultimate goal is to keep children safe and families together. There is no one-size-fits-all approach with this type of work. Each family presents with a unique and very complex set of needs. Our staff work tirelessly to provide support, education and counseling to parents who have lost their way as caretakers. It's tough work to say the least but the rewards are so great.

In each region across the ten counties we serve, we take care to employ members from that community. We know it's important to pair families up with caring staff who reflect the common values of their community. We're grateful to be a part of these communities and we're proud of the work we're doing to make them stronger. And as for Jack?

10 months after his case closed with us, Jack's mom and dad remain clean and sober. Jack is living at home again; thriving in the safety of his stable home – with his two loving parents.

Foster Home Licensing and Special Needs Adoption

To look at him now you might never know the trauma that this sweet little boy endured. And we are grateful for that. You see, at 7 weeks old, Cason was shaken very badly by his biological mother who then put him to bed for the night. The next morning, baby Cason was unresponsive. His birth mother called 911 and he was then air lifted to Iowa City. The doctors and nurses treating Cason were hopeless. He was suffering from seizures and had lost his eye sight and hearing – the result of having been shaken so badly. The doctors thought, if he did make it, he would probably never see again. He was in a full body cast and was diagnosed with Shaken Baby Syndrome.

Cason was released from the hospital and placed in a temporary foster home. Family Resources, through our involvement in Iowa KidsNet, was responsible for identifying a “forever family” for Cason. But who would care for a child with such significant needs?

Jennie and Sean Peakin – that's who. The Peakin's were interested in being foster parents and were open to the idea of adoption. Music to our ears, they were open to being paired with children with special needs.

The Peakins brought Cason home on Christmas morning in 2011 – a Christmas miracle for them and for him. But, Cason had a long road of healing and therapy ahead of him. At 11 months old, he functioned like an 8 week old infant. He could not sit up or roll over. He did not use his left side at all. His hearing and eye sight were still in extremely poor condition.

Look at him now, nearly two years later, Cason is running around with the boundless energy and enthusiasm of a healthy toddler. He has his full hearing back and no longer requires the use his glasses – although we think he was pretty darn cute with them!

The Impact of Our Work

Restoring a Sense of SAFETY through Education

Nearly 40% of our teaching staff are pursuing Master's Degrees, most in Special Education.

The Wittenmyer Learning Center

Alivia Bassett thinks back to when she first started classes at the Wittenmyer Learning Center (WLC). By her own account she was fighting, arguing, skipping classes and failing in most of her subjects. She credits the relationships she built with WLC staff and peers in helping her to raise her self-esteem and improve her outlook on life. She became motivated to focus on school and improve her grades. Alivia made the choice to redirect the energy she was wasting being negative and concentrate on achieving her potential. She began believing what her teachers at Wittenmyer Learning Center were telling her – she could do anything she put her mind to.

Alivia has now transitioned into public high school in Davenport. She credits her success to WLC.

SafetyNet

their education and teach them how to have positive behaviors, which will help them get back to regular schools,” Alivia recently told the Davenport Community School District Board of Directors during a presentation about the learning center.

The Wittenmyer Learning Center serves the educational needs of children placed in our foster group care programs, as well as students from surrounding community school districts in grades K- 12. We provide a safe, therapeutic setting where each student's academic, behavioral and emotional needs are addressed. Nearly 130 children each day call the “Learning Center” their school.

“They feel safe here,” says Cheryl Goodwin, President/CEO. “They feel like they can finally achieve and they're not given up on, no matter what behavior they might exhibit. We are there for them day in and day out to support, to teach and to hold them accountable.”

We are committed to teaching 21st century skills to all of our students; understanding that we are educating the future workforces in our communities. Technology plays a significant role in our curriculum. This year, thanks to a grant from the Riverboat Development Authority, we have added document cameras, projectors, and Mimio pads for classroom access. Recently, we added a portable wireless tablet lab for use in our elementary school. These new additions allow our students to become familiar with the latest technological advances that they might encounter as they progress through their education and enter into their chosen career fields. Teachers monitor student progress and develop interactive lesson plans. The Mimio Pads and bars have given us the ability to turn traditional white dry erase boards into interactive smart boards, allowing students to write on pads and have their work projected for the class.

We are proud to be a safe place where kids can learn and find success in the classroom. Yet another way Family Resources is working to make our shared communities stronger.

According to Achieve Quad Cities, three Quad City children drop out of school each day – the cost to the community is greater than $500,000 over their lifetime in reduced income, poorer health and increased dependence on social services. Last year, we helped 263 children find success in the classroom.

Partners in our Work

Volunteers

Thank You Volunteers! Last year over 300 volunteers contributed to nearly 15,000 hours of service – saving the agency over $300,000. We offer our sincere appreciation to you all for donating your time, talent and passion!

yogaG

In 2008 Sarah Johnson was daydreaming at a Family Resources' Board meeting about how yoga might support the important services for families impacted by domestic violence, particularly at the domestic violence shelter. And so yogaG was born. yogaG is a non-profit whose work is rooted in partnership with Family Resources. All yogaG instructors have completed intensive training on Trauma Sensitive Yoga. This year at the domestic violence shelter, yogaG has been leading classes for staff, children, and women on a weekly basis, while also coordinating urgent donation needs and monthly shelter dinners with their community partners, the Sedona Group and Mel Foster Realty. They've recently broaden their focus to include yoga sessions with the youth in our 24 hour foster group care programs. We are so grateful for the support of yogaG and all that they offer to aid in the healing process for our clients.

yogaG...a simple, powerful gift. To learn more, please find them on Facebook or visit them at www.yogaG.org

United Way Day of Caring

On Wednesday, August 21st over 50 volunteers from various divisions of John Deere converged on our main campus in Davenport. Proudly flying their company colors, they rolled up their sleeves to assist with interior painting projects and campus landscaping. Family Resources' is grateful to be a United Way Day of Caring project site. Each year our volunteer teams get done in a day what would take our mighty maintenance crew of 3 several days to complete. Thank you United Way of the Quad Cities and John Deere!

Girls Night Out for a Cause

Family Resources has been the fortunate recipient of support from an incredible group of ladies, "Girls Night Out for a Cause," for many years. From adopting children and families during the holidays to funding projects like therapy bears for children and crisis kits for sexual assault victims, this group knows how to get it done – and they have a fun time doing it! Says spokeswoman, Paula Moroney:

"Our group, Girls Night Out for a Cause (GNO) has enjoyed a lengthy relationship with Family Resources. The pairing was a natural fit as their program speaks easily to our mission; to bring into a social setting, a diverse group of women who are committed to consistently giving to the women and children of the Quad Cities through financial means, while benefiting from friendships, networking and support. The numerous means of assisting under the umbrella of Family Resources, allows GNO to direct funds to specific areas we vote upon annually. It's a win-win situation as the women and children of the Quad Cities receive resources we are able to provide while our group revels in the impact we are able to make."

Volunteer Driven Fundraisers

We gain incredible fundraising support from our dedicated teams of volunteer planning committees who give of their time, talent and treasures to support our mission.

Opening Doors Gala

This year we held our 7th Annual Opening Doors Gala at the Quad-Cities Waterfront Convention Center in Bettendorf. 260 friends of Family Resources came out to help us raise over $65,000.

Dove – Domestic Violence Ended

Our 6th Annual Dove Women's Golf Tournament was held on Friday, June 7th at Palmer Hills Golf Course in Bettendorf. This special "ladies only" tournament brings together caring women in a fun environment to address a serious issue – domestic violence. 144 Golfers participated in this year's tournament. The Women's Golf Tournament is one of three DOVE events. Also associated with DOVE is our Fill the Truck event at all Quad City and Muscatine HyVee locations and an Isabel Bloom Signing Event, where a limited edition sculpture is unveiled and proceeds benefit our critical services. Combined, the three events raised nearly $50,000 to support our Domestic Violence Shelter and Services.

Drive 4 Ur Community Event

On Saturday, September 14th, Family Resources partnered with Dahl Ford Davenport for our first ever Drive 4 Ur Community Event. Dahl Ford brought over 11 New Ford Vehicles and friends of the agency came out for a spin. For every completed test drive the Ford Motor Company donated $20; raising nearly $2,000 to support our programs and services.

Honor the Women

On Friday, October 11th, Family Resources held our 3rd Annual Honor the Women Luncheon to benefit our SafePath Survivor Resources (formerly known as the Rape/Sexual Assault Counseling & Advocacy Program). In addition to the traditional luncheon, we were able to bring an awareness program to area high school and college students thanks to a partnership with Augustana College. This year's luncheon raised nearly $23,000.

Muscatine New Beginnings

Family Resources' 12th Annual Muscatine New Beginnings event, supporting services provided in the Muscatine community, was held on Saturday, April 6th at the Geneva Country Club in Muscatine. This entertaining and high spirited event includes: live and silent auctions, 50/50 raffle, door prizes, and "New Beginnings" sponsorships to support women leaving our Domestic Violence shelter and making the transition to safe and permanent housing. Nearly 200 friends of Family Resources gathered for the event, helping us to raise over $73,000 to support our programs and services in Muscatine!
